The Difference Between a Domain Name and Web Hosting

A domain name is the address of your website that people type in the browser's URL bar to visit your website.

In other words, if your website was a house, then your domain name will be its address. Web hosting is the place where all the files of your website live. It is like the home of your website where it actually lives.

A good way to think about this is if the domain name was the address of your house, then web hosting is the actual house that address points to. All websites on the internet need web hosting.

Can I Move My Website to Another Web Hosting Company Without Changing Domain?

Yes, you can. You own the domain name and can change its settings to point it to any web hosting company.

For example, you purchased your domain name and hosting from Godaddy, and now you want to move your web hosting to Bluehost. You can move your site from one host to another by simply transferring files and data.

Below you will find recommended hosting options.

If you have any more hosting/domain questions, please do not hesitate to ask.
